Japanese old master tops the attendance tree

In Tokyo and Kyoto, Hasegawa Tohaku pulls in the crowds, as does Abe Lincoln in Washington, DC

Forecasting exhibition attendance is an unpredictable science. Who would have thought that the six-foot-high plaster model of a statue of Abraham Lincoln would attract 9,290 visitors a day to the National Gallery of Art, Washington, DC? "Designing the Lincoln Memorial" lacked the magic words "treasures", "impressionism" or "gold" in the title and yet it attracted 2.9m visitors in total, putting it third overall in The Art Newspaper's 17th annual survey of attendance figures. The show, marking the bicentenary of Lincoln's birth, was free to visit, but then so is strolling down the National Mall to admire Daniel Chester French's finished sculpture of the 16th US President.

The survey of 2010 exhibitions is more international than ever, featuring for the first time figures from several Brazilian and Korean venues. Two shows by women artists, Rebecca Horn and Regina Silveira, plus another of Islamic art, each attracted just short of 7,000 visitors a day to Rio de Janeiro's Centro Cultural Banco do Brazil. These figures, again for free exhibitions, placed the bank foundation's venue into the top 15 worldwide.

Japanese museums retain the top spots in the exhibition survey. The Tokyo National Museum's show of work by Hasegawa Tohaku (1539-1610) on the artist's 400th anniversary, which included his masterpiece Pine Trees, attracted more than 12,000 daily visitors. That was around 2,000 visitors a day more than the museum's then record-breaking Leonardo exhibition of 2007. Post-impressionist paintings from the Musée d'Orsay put the National Art Center Tokyo in runner-up position. Almost 11,000 visitors a day went to see works by Cézanne, Van Gogh and others on the Japanese leg of a world tour that also included Canberra and San Francisco. Van Gogh's work on their own attracted more than 8,400 visitors a day to Tokyo's National Art Center, a purpose-built blockbuster mill boasting 14,000 sq. metres of exhibition space. This means Japan is still the home of blockbusters, even when the Nara National Museum's annual exhibition of Shoso-in Treasures (23 October-11 November 2010), which attracted 14,533 daily visitors, is excluded. We have omitted these extraordinary "temple shows" from the survey this year as visiting for many is more of an act of religious veneration than art appreciation.

Turning to total museum attendance, there was almost no change at the top. The Louvre in Paris remains first among equals, based on an estimated figure of 8.5m visitors, the same as the previous two years. The Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, weathered the recession, attracting 326,000 more visitors than last year, while cutting back on its exhibition budget by 39%. The decision of Thomas Campbell, the director of the Met, to bring forward its in-house Picasso show paid dividends. It finished eighth worldwide, and second in New York.

As canny was staging a show of its Tutankhamun artefacts to coincide with the travelling King Tut blockbuster near Times Square, diverting 2,890 people a day uptown to Fifth Avenue. But New York's Museum of Modern Art still organised nine of the city's top ten shows, including Marina Abramovic's one-woman performance. She attracted 7,120 a day.

Parisians flocked to the Pinacothèque's "L'Age d'Or" show featuring Rembrandts and Vermeers lent by Amsterdam's Rijksmuseum: 5,738 a day to be precise. The heavily advertised show ranked higher than the Grand Palais' shows of work by Turner, Renoir, and Christian Boltanski's installation in its nave for Monumenta.

Van Gogh's paintings and letters at London's Royal Academy of Arts returned the institution to the top of that city's exhibition attendance league. The National Gallery in London's surprise hit was a free show of Ed Kienholz and Nancy Reddin Kienholz's atmospheric installation of a Dutch red-light district, The Hoerengracht, which attracted 2,400 visitors a day.

There was no Banksy effect this year, which gave the Bristol Museum and Art Gallery in the west of England its moment in

Methodology

All figures were calculated automatically by our database, which computes the number of days an exhibition was open using the following formula: total number of days between start date and end date, divided by seven, multiplied by the number of days per week the institution is open, minus exceptional closures. As this formula can produce fractions (divisions of seven), all figures are out by a potential margin of 2%. As the same margin applies uniformly to all averages given, the list represents a fair comparison, however. All data used was supplied by the institutions concerned. Many institutions have one ticket for the entire museum and cannot provide individual attendance for temporary exhibitions. Some institutions offer a number of exhibitions for a single ticket: these are shown as one entry. Institutions with more than one building were asked to provide separate total museum attendance figures for each venue. These venues are marked with an asterisk (*). Institutions that could not provide separate figures were excluded from this portion of the survey.

the spotlight in 2009. Instead, the University of Oxford's Ashmolean Museum of Art and Archaeology deserves a mention. Post-refurbishment, its visitor figures trebled to a record-breaking 1.04m a year, showing that scholarship and popularity are not mutually exclusive.

Other high achievers on the other side of the world were Brisbane's adjoining Queensland Gallery of Art and Gallery of Modern Art. They presented six of Australia's ten most visited shows. "Masterpieces of Paris", an exhibition of post-impressionist paintings from the Musée d'Orsay, on show at the National Gallery of Australia, Canberra, prevented the Brisbane institutions from getting a clean sweep of the nation's top five shows.

We are grateful to the museums and organisations who have taken part in this survey. The Brazilian Institute of Museums and the Korean National Museum provided extensive visitor figures for the first time. Sadly, the Garage Centre for Contemporary Art, Moscow, the Philadelphia Museum of Art and the Dallas Museum of Art, which all ranked highly last year, were among those unable to provide statistics in time to be included. The Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam, could only provide its overall visitor figures for 2010. ■

There was minimal movement among the ten most visited museums last year but their directors must be feeling satisfied at the rise in attendance across the board. The British Museum attracted 270,000 more visitors than in 2009, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, was up by 326,000, and more visitors to Tate Modern meant it joined them in that elite club, the 5m-plus über museum. The director of the Museu Picasso, Barcelona, a modestly sized institution that is tucked away in the city's old quarter, has perhaps the most reason to feel pleased. The museum leapt from the 40s to 24th overall, having organised such tempting shows as "Secret Images: Picasso and the Japanese Erotic Print". This and other exhibitions enticed 1.3m visitors in 2010. ■ J.P.

Institutions with more than one building such as the Getty (Getty Center: 1,205,685 visitors; Getty Villa: 405,710 visitors) were asked to provide separate total museum attendance figures for each venue. These venues are marked above with an asterisk (*).

CONTEMPORARY TOP TEN

	New York's Museum of Modern Art (MoMA) maintained its dominance of contemporary art shows in 2010, organising four of the top eight. The next most visited shows in this category were not in Paris or London, but in Rio de Janeiro, at the Centro Cultural Banco do Brasil, a new venue in the survey (left, Rebecca Horn, Concert for Anarchy, 1990). Although Tate Modern's overall attendance was 2m more than MoMA's, the London museum's most visited show, "Pop Life", ranked only 57th, something its new director, Chris Dercon, will want to rectify. And more people went to see it in Hamburg (2,141 per day) than in London (1,818). ■ J.P.

THEMATIC TOP TEN

This category includes shows that span time periods and/or categories but fall under one theme. An exhibition of 300 works spanning 13 centuries of Islamic art pulled in the crowds in Brazil with the country's first major show devoted to the subject holding the top spot (left, 14th-century ceramic plate). The Grand Palais' "Turner and the Masters" in second spot brought in almost 3,300 more visitors daily than the Madrid presentation, and 3,600 more than the London exhibition. Last year's number one, "Treasures of the Habsburg Monarchy", comes in a respectable third with 4,158 daily visitors seeing the Kyoto leg of the travelling show. ■ E.S.

IMPRESSIONIST AND MODERN TOP TEN

While the Musée d'Orsay's decision to send 220 of its impressionist and post-impressionist works on tour to help fund the museum's €11.4m overhaul caused controversy in France, it was a major boon for the borrowing institutions. First and eighth positions go to shows of the museum's collection in Tokyo and San Francisco (left, detail, Bouguereau, Birth of Venus, 1879). A staggering 10,757 daily visitors queued to see works by Cézanne, Van Gogh and Seurat in Tokyo. The National Art Centre Tokyo also claims second and fifth place for shows devoted to Van Gogh and Renoir respectively. Van Gogh also drew crowds in London, coming in seventh in this category and first for shows mounted in London in 2010. ■ E.S.

ANTIQUITIES TOP TEN

MEDIEVAL TOP TEN

The Middle Ages continues to wane in popularity; for the second year in a row the category has failed to register ten shows. Both illuminated manuscripts and the Getty Center return to prominence after a year's absence: manuscripts are the mainstay of medieval exhibitions and the Getty not only has a large collection, but is also committed to showing them. Unusually for shows of medieval art, sculpture made a big hit with the tomb figures of the Valois Dukes of Burgundy at the Met and in St Louis (left, De la Huerta and le Moiturier, Mourner from the Tomb of Jean Sans Peur, 1443-57). Jewish manuscript illumination was popular in Israel, and it would be interesting to know the ages of those who attended the Getty's scriptorium show as it made a big pitch to interest children. ■ D.L.

OLD MASTERS TOP TEN

Last year was the 500th anniversary of the death of Botticelli (left, Idealised Portrait, undated) and the 400th of Caravaggio, and both were honoured by popular shows (unthinkable two generations ago in the case of the latter). Botticelli drew the largest crowds in Frankfurt's Städel museum's history, a fascinating fact that calls for closer inspection. Netherlandish Renaissance artists challenged the almost exclusive hold of Italian artists in this category, with Memling coming first and appearing again with Bruegel and Van Eyck at the Jacquemart-André, a Parisian museum more famous for its 18th-century art. The Japanese again prove themselves eager for "the treasures of" European museums, in this case the Capodimonte in Naples. ■ D.L.

ARCHITECTURE AND DESIGN TOP TEN

US museums organised five shows and European ones four in this category's top ten, but Brazil shared some of the spotlight with "Saint-Étienne: Design City" at the Centro Cultural Banco do Brasil in sixth place. MoMA claims the top two spots with "Bauhaus 1919-33" and "Rising Currents". Both shows were the only ones in the category to make the top 40 in the general attendance tally. The Guggenheim's golden anniversary Frank Lloyd Wright show placed as last year, this time in Bilbao. French architect Jean Nouvel's bright red Serpentine Pavilion (left) proved just as popular as previous summer houses at the London gallery. ■ B.R.

19TH-CENTURY TOP TEN

The Lincoln Memorial, is, with the White House and Congress Building, one of the biggest tourist attractions in the US capital. A free show about its design at the National Gallery of Art, Washington, DC proved a surprise hit, all the same. In a category that is normally the exclusive domain of French painting (left, Rousseau's The Football Players, 1908, in Bilbao), Germanic artists—the Von Alts—made inroads, as did the Prussian Von Langsdorff, whose expedition in the Amazon, 1826-29, was the subject of the popular travelling show in Rio and São Paulo. Christen Købke was the dark horse, although the high visitor numbers in London may have, like the Lincoln Memorial show, been due to free entry. ■ D.L.

ASIAN TOP TEN

Japanese museums hold five of the top ten places, including first and second for a travelling survey of Japanese painter Hasegawa Tohaku (1539-1610). With 12,116 daily visitors, the Tokyo leg tops this year's overall exhibition attendance. But China, Taiwan and Korea are now serious contenders in this field. Korean museums come sixth and tenth with shows of ancient artefacts, including a display of royal crowns from the Baekje Kingdom, while China and Taiwan each claim one position. The Freer and Sackler, Washington, DC, the only western institution in the top ten, did well with a show devoted to the Falnama, an Islamic book of omens (left, Adam & Eve Expelled from Paradise, 1550s). ■ E.S.
